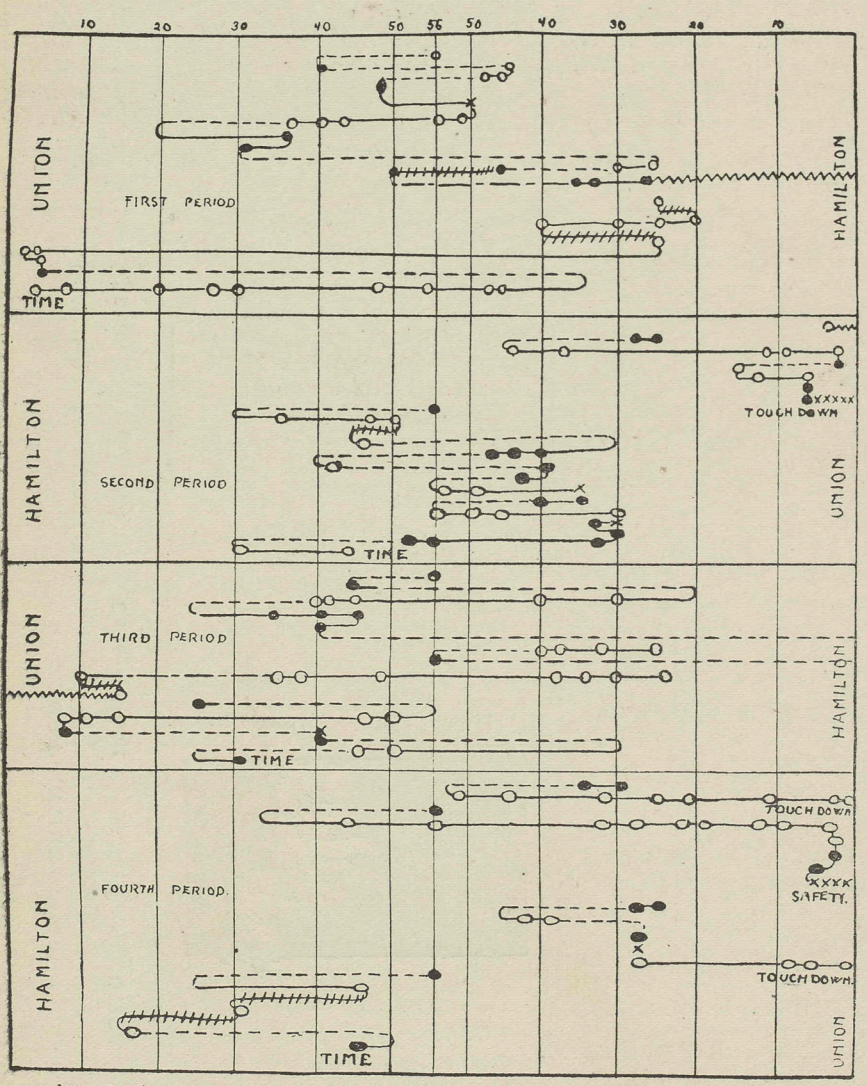
UNION NEVER HAD A CHANCE.

Dismayed by Capt. Knox's Long Run Early in the Game, Union Was Completely Outplayed---Our Team Shows Great Improvement in Offense.



In their annual game, Hamilton did the unexpected by roundly trouncing Union. Far exceeding our fondest hopes, the Team, welded at last into a rugged, fast, and powerful machine, slashed through the Union wings for gain after gain. With the line opening huge holes for them, the backs romped through the disheartened Union defense and twisted, dodged and squirmed their way along for thirty first downs. From the first time Hamilton was in possession of the ball the consistency of attack was marvelous in a team whose offensive work has been ragged in the extreme. Seldom were our backs downed for no gain; time after time they reeled off 10, 15, and 25 yards at a clip. With our line working together, with almost perfect interference by the backs, and with fierce, determined running with the ball, Union was absolutely bewildered. No better knit attack has ever been sustained throughout a game by a Hamilton team since 1905. Knox, Stone and Robinson, after running desperately for 55 minutes, seemed just as fresh in the last few minutes as at the beginning of the game. Root and LaForce, the big tackles, although turning back the brunt of Union's attack, were as agile in the tackles-back formation as in the preliminary practice. The fierce charge instilled into the team this past week by Thompson, '06, and Moore, ex-'10, and the natural spirit of wishing to smother our greatest rivals impelled the whole line to sweep forward irresistably on offense as well as on defense. Time after time Fairbairn had to punt almost from under the arms of an onrushing Hamilton man; and when in the crucial times that he tried to punt out of danger from his own goal line, he was fairly hidden by the rush of blue jerseys.

The brilliant Sarvey, mainstay of the Union offense, gained just 25 yards during the whole game, notwithstanding that he carried the ball every other play. It was beautiful to see Eddy, Root, and Fear converge on Union's cross-bucks, crumple the interference, and slam the dreaded halfback unmercifully to the ground. Nor were the line plunges of the bulky Wood treated kindly. With these two runners helpless, Union offensively was wholly at sea.

How the Hill resounded during Knox's long run up the field! And when Leavenworth was disclosed hugging the ball across the line for our first touchdown! Such enthusiasm did us all good. The College to a man was behind the team—as Colson

EDITORIAL.

We believe that the write-up of the Union game in this issue sufficiently expresses the opinion of Life without needing any editorial comment. Suffice it to say that the Team exceeded our fondest expectations.

We hope that the extra edition of Life after the Union game meets with the approval of our readers. Having no precedent to follow, the Board made its mistakes—that was to be expected. Nor is the equipment of a village newspaper office well adapted to such rush work as was required to publish by six p. m. an account of a game ending at 5:25.

The Editor wishes to acknowledge fully that the credit for the feat belongs primarily to Lyon, '13, who suggested the scheme and sacrificed the opportunity of viewing the game in order to be at The Courier office to bring order from the chaotic telephone messages sent to him, and secondarily, in equal measure, to the hearty co-operation of the Freshman candidates for Life and the Courier staff.

Presumably the Sophomores believe their revival of scurf posters to be a brilliant idea. Unfortunately, perhaps Life cannot take a similar attitude. Inasmuch as there is no better criterion of a college than the opinions of the residents of the village or city in which that college is located, it behooves us of Hamilton to avoid any trespass on the rights of Clinton people. Plastering show windows, buildings, and posts with posters glaringly green and not even worth reading will scarcely further friendship for the College. 1912 and 1913, for their depredations in celebration of Hallowe'en, had to settle for damages committed to the extent of $200. If the villagers demand a fair sum from 1914 for the evening's sport, the class need expect no sympathy from the College.

To give an impulse to the moral wave sweeping over the College, as exemplified in the abolition of Latin trots by the Sophomores and the contemplation of a similar action by the Freshmen, it might well be considered whether the politics of the College can not be placed on an equitable basis. While their presence has never in recent years been grossly prominent, that deals have existed and still do exist cannot be denied by even the most optimistic persons. In fact, Life charges that a deal had been formulated to control the recent elections in the Freshman Class. Four crowds were involved in the deal; each crowd was to have a candidate for an office and to receive the combined vote—a good old-time iron-clad deal. Any scheme utterly to do away with deals should be considered.

But to Life, it is not the deals that present the really serious problem; no crowd can consistently secure offices unfairly without so incurring the enmity of the rest of the rest of the students that candidates of that crowd really deserving election are defeated, the vote being not on the candidate himself but as to whether his crowd should be given the office. The real problem is to eradicate the all-pervading suspicion among the students that elections are not entirely fair. Scarcely an election occurs but the conversation at lunch teems with accusations against some crowds for having been in a deal. Such suspicion does much harm to the feeling of good fellowship of which we are so proud and is manifestly unfair to the crowds if the suspicion is without actual cause.

We might well fear that Freshmen, as many come from fraternity-ridden preparatory schools, see no harm in engineering or in participating in deals, but we understand that upperclassmen had proposed and promoted this deal. Should we infer from the fact that upperclassmen were involved that the College as a whole wishes deals to be an active influence in our politics? Surely not. Or that any crowd so wishes? It cannot be; there must be a wholesome spirit of fairness on the Hill, or, at least, a general feeling that deals do not pay in the long run. But why, then, are deals countenanced, not to say enencouraged? Why, especially, are Freshmen taught that deals are essential? Deals exist, we believe, only because each crowd, mistrusting the fairness of the other crowds, fears that a deal may be promulgated to defeat its preferred candidate.

How may we accomplish the destruction of these evils; deals themselves and the aforesaid suspicion? Life, believing that the presence of deals is not generally looked upon with favor, suggests that this adverse opinion, if it does exist, be crystallized in some manner. Inasmuch as there is no neutral body in College, the best and simplest method of crystallization, one which also precludes the existence of unfair or even suspicious elections, is a compact in which each crowd pledges absolutely to abstain from deals. Such a compact would, we believe, seldom if ever be broken. If there should be any doubt as to the efficacy of such a compact, a provision might be inserted to abrogate the agreement at the expiration of a limited number of years—say, four. Thus, the College might ascertain the practicability of the scheme, and if it were found inexpedient, could resume the present system of untrammeled political machinations. Certainly no harm could be done; and much good might ensue. As has been said, such a compact would tend to accomplish two things: free our elections from unfairness, and remove the possibility of there being any suspicion as to any unfairness.

Life has given the College its opinion; but the College must decide. Do the crowds—for it is a crowd matter—want deals abolished? If the crowds pledge not to enter any deal, will deals be abolished? If so, are the crowds willing so to pledge? These are the vital questions. Think the whole matter over; a crystallization of opinion will be sought later.

Life Board meeting at the Kirkland Inn Tuesday night, ten o'clock sharp.

THE DAY OF THE GAME.

As Seen by an Onlooker.

There was victory in the air. The sun seemed to have caught the spirit of the day and smiled a genial welcome to Kirkland's Hill. Drowsy denizens of Carnegie for once made chapel comfortably. In the faces of the men, in the banter over the breakfast coffee, in the clear ring of Carissima after prayers, there was a glad assurance. Freshmen passed through portas Averni to number one Truax with a song on their lips. Here and there "bevies of handsome girls" listened to Sophomore cicerones who gravely expatiated on the best line that this generation has seen.

By two o'clock the tension had almost reached the breaking point. A horde came up from Union and fell among friends. Out in front of Old Middle there were nervous exhortations to line up and weird bleatings from the Clinton Military Band. Then the long line of undergraduates marched onto the field led by "Billiken" Bates. "We come to hang our banners on triumphant walls!" There was a lilt in the cadence that told Union that Hamilton was there to win.

The arrival of the Hamilton rooters was a signal for a rousing cheer from the Union stand — a cheer returned with zest from the bleachers where the buff and blue colors were flaunting in gay defiance. Never was a gayer picture seen on Steuben Field. Above was the clear blue; below stretched the long sere field, dotted here and there with panting Freshmen; and all about and around were waving banners and eager faces.

Then with a rush the two teams swept onto the field. On the stands a tense stillness followed the roar of welcome. A shrill whistle, a flashing blue line, a whirling pigskin, and the game was on.

For the first few minutes of play the Garnet line, tossing back and forth, seemed to advance on the Hamilton goal. Union held, tried a drop kick and failed. A joyful sigh arose from the east stand. Then Captain Knox did something to tell about. Down, down he raced—a streak of blue with the Garnet backs in full cry —on to Union's four-yard line. It was the psychological moment. The turning point was reached, the game was won.

D. K. E. ENTERTAINS.

Tau of Delta Kappa Epsilon entertained informally at the Chapter House on Saturday evening, November 11. The guests were present at the football game in the afternoon and between the halves attended a tea given by Mrs. Horace Seely Brown at "Sonnige Hoh." Mrs. Crydenwise poured. Mrs. Watrous and Mrs. Hastings were chaperones and the guests were the Misses Sherwood, Grovinor, and Sheridan of Syracuse, Miss Hutchins of Ilion, the Misses Weist and Babcock of Boonville, the Misses Holden, Anibal and Lansing of Gloversville, Miss Brown of New York, the Misses Earle and Potter of Gouverneur, Miss Saunders of Hamilton, Miss Goodenough of Jamaica, the Misses Sanborn and Geer of Utica, Miss Osborn of New Hartford, Mrs. R. U. Hayes of Clinton, Barrows, '06, Nellis, '06, and wife, Thompson, '06, and Wright, '05.

E. L. S. INFORMAL.

Last Saturday evening E. L. S. entertained at an informal dance. The following were the guests: Misses Latcher, Seaton, Harwood, Nelson, Lombard, Barney and Porter of Utica, Misses Christy, Ingersoll, Lewis, Burch, Dimock of Ilion, Miss Colson, New York Mills, Miss Munger, Deansboro, Misses Mary Thompson of Thompson Ridge and Marie Thompson of Buffalo, Miss Higley of Kirkville, Miss Bloss of Blossvale, Miss Vail of Hampton, Miss Stratton of Mt. Upton, Misses Carpenter, Pohl and Hanagan of Vernon, Messrs, McKennon and Bergner of Utica, Hopkins of Canandaigua, Geo. Thompson and Vail of Thompson Ridge, Alex. Thompson, '06, of Little Britain, Pa., Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Clapp and Miss Lona Clapp of Mechanicville, and Mrs. O. E. Shaul of Ilion.

CHESS TOURNAMENT.

The Chess Elimination Tournament began last Monday. About a dozen men have handed their names to Adams, '12, as desiring to enter. The rules of the tournament are as follows: Each man shall play two games with every other member; each game will count one, and a draw will count one-half for each participant. The man with the highest score will be acknowledged College Champion, and the four men with the highest scores will compose the team.

A match in the near future with Renssalaer Polytechnic Institute is practically assured.

Y. M. C. A.

President Bedenkapp of the Y. M. C. A. plans to have a speaker every other Sunday during the present college year. Last Sunday a prayer meeting was held at which a fair gathering was present. Next week the Rev. John Snape of the Baptist Tabernacle, Utica, will address the meeting. On December 3rd Dr. Arthur S. Hoyt of Auburn will speak.

The ninth annual convention of the Student Volunteer Union of Central New York will be held in Auburn on December 8th, 9th and 10th. The purpose of the convention is to present to college men the conditions and needs of the non-Christian world and to stimulate missionary interest in the colleges. Last year the convention was held in Schenectady. About forty fellows from Hamilton went down and were greatly benefited by it.

It is hoped that as many men and if possible more, will go to Auburn this year. Particulars may be had from Bedenkapp, '12, Corliss, '13, Barnes, '14, or Dayton, '14.

—The proposed bridge-whist tournament seems to interest the College considerably, for, so far, over twenty teams are entered. The entry list will be held open until Wednesday, at which time the drawing for the contestants in the first round will be made. As was stated last week, the matches are to be played within a week.

Manager Ingersoll reports that he has arranged for a meet with Union at Clinton on May 14. He is also negotiating with several colleges for a meet off the Campus. Whether or not a schedule for a relay team can be arranged, the squad consisting of Captain Eggleston, '12, Roberts, Wenigmann, Shaul and Hahn, '13, Lee, '14, and Riddell, '15, will start practice after Thanksgiving. With these strong runners as a nucleus, a winning team should be developed.

PROGRESS OF MUSICAL CLUBS.

Quartette at Work—Gouge Will be Able to Go on Trips.

With the splendid reputation of former years to live up to, and with the knowledge that they are to represent an activity in which Hamilton excels more than in any other department, with these considerations as incentives for work the Musical Clubs are slowly but surely polishing off the rough spots and attaining that finesse and harmonious ensemble so desirable and so marked in former years.

The quartette, composed of Gouge, Marsh, Thompson and Sidle, will, as last year, be one of the most prominent features, having an entirely new repertoire which will be catchy and clever as heretofore. The soloists will be Knox and Gouge, the former singing with Glee Club accompaniment and the latter alone, or accompanied by the Mandolin Club.

Leaders Eells and Thompson are both working on tutti-fruttis for their respective organizations and both should be commended for the splendid way in which the Clubs are working. Manager Boone is strongly in favor of a Christmas trip with New York as its objective. These are the main arguments in favor of the trip: that it will mean a matter of an additional three or four hundred dollars for the treasury, and, secondly, that, barring Easter, it will be the only chance for an extended trip. This, of course, is purely a matter for the Clubs and their leaders to decide. It can be taken only if the Clubs feel like working an extra day a week, and if the leaders think that even with this extra practice a presentable showing can be made.

NEWS OF CHARLATANS.

Play for Organization Soon to be Chosen.

The Charlatans held a meeting in Commons last Wednesday evening at which they elected Warren DuBois, '12, President, and George Lyon, '13, Secretary-Treasurer and Manager of the organization. All who shall have paid one dollar to the treasurer before the next meeting will be considered members, and will be entitled to a try-out. Professor Shepard has selected Professor Scollard, Professor Chase and Thomas Jones of Utica as a committee to select the play.

Parts of scenes will be assigned to those who will try-out.

COLLEGE DINES AT COMMONS.

A Rousing Send-off to Team on Friday Night, Led by Colson, Drummond and Thompson.

The spirit of the dinner in Commons Friday night was the same spirit which defeated Union on Steuben Field Saturday. There was no artificiality in the enthusiasm, no blind, headstrong optimism, merely a quiet, fixed determination to break a two years' tie by a Hamilton victory.

The speeches all voiced the same note, a confidence which could afford not to vaunt itself. Colson, '11, was first called on. He proclaimed the power of determination, urging that Hamilton's physical ability to win be backed by the will power of team and College. A cheer for the speaker, a cheer for the team and a football song followed each speech.

"Alec" Drummond, '06, who has been the most faithful of the graduate coaches, spoke briefly, asking the confidence of the College in the Team.

Thompson, '06, who for two weeks has worked with the Team and who is responsible for much of the snap they displayed against Union, made a powerful plea for faithfulness. His striking delivery held the attention and aroused the enthusiasm of the College.

Head-coach Sidle, Captain Knox and Don Root had to respond to calls, and briefly expressed their hopes of victory.

The singing of Carissima while the enthusiasm was at its height was well timed. A more inspiring ante-bellum gathering has not been held on the Hill. It had its part in the victory.

UNION NEVER HAD A CHANCE.

expressed it, "Willing them to win." Staid Alumni patted Freshmen on the back, while words are too feeble instruments to describe the wild exultation of the younger graduates. It was a Hamilton day, one which brings us all more closely together.

From a statistical standpoint Hamilton was far more superior than the score indicates. Union was unable to retain possession of the ball, being compelled to punt time and again. On the other hand, Hamilton slashed through the Union defense for long gains and short, but seldom stopped until they had rammed the ball well down the field.

The diagram prefacing this account will give an accurate idea of the play throughout the game. But here are a few tabulated facts:

First Quarter.

First downs, Union 1, Hamilton 7.

Total yards rushed, Union 10, Hamilton 170½.

Total distance punted, Union 150, Hamilton 40.

Average distance punted, Union 50, Hamilton 13 1-3.

Total distance punts returned, Union 15, Hamilton 10.

Total distance gained on forward passes, Union 25, Hamilton 5.

Second Quarter.

First downs, Union 1, Hamilton 6.

Total yards rushed, Union 16, Hamilton 115½.

Total distance punted, Union 121, Hamilton 63.

Average distance punted, Union 17½, Hamilton 31½.

Total distance punts returned, Union 10, Hamilton 7.

Third Quarter.

First downs, Union 1, Hamilton 8.

Total distance rushed, Union 11 yards, Hamilton 116 yards.

Total distance punted, Union 235 yards, Hamilton 80 yards.

Average distance punted, Union 47 yards, Hamilton 20 yards.

Total distance gained by returning punts, Union 15 yards, Hamilton 45 yards.

Fourth Quarter.

First downs, Union 0, Hamilton 9.

Total distance rushed, Union 15 yards, Hamilton 136 yards.

Total distance punted, Union 34 yards, Hamilton 47 yards.

Average distance punted, Union 17 yards, Hamilton 23½ yards.

In Whole Game.

First downs, Union 3, Hamilton 30.

Total distance rushed, Union 52 yards, Hamilton 538 yards.

Total distance punted, Union 540 yards, Hamilton 230 yards.

Average distance punted, Union 32 yards, Hamilton 21 yards.

Distance gained returning punts, Union 40 yards, Hamilton 55 yards.

Total distance gained on forward passes, Union 26 yards on four attempts, Hamilton 30 yards on three attempts.

Total distance gained through center of line, Union 21 yards, Hamilton 95 yards.

Total distance gained through tackle or around end, Union 31 yards, Hamilton 443 yards.

In explanation of these statistics, it should be stated that we have considered the distance of a punt to be from the scrimmage line to the spot where the ball was picked up or to the goal line in case the ball rolled over. Several of Union's punts flew over the heads of our backs and were rolled by the wind sometimes forty yards over the line. Against the wind Hamilton averaged in punting 17.1 yards; Union, 17.2. With the wind, however, Union had a better average than Hamilton: averaging 48 yards to 27 for Hamilton.

With these figures our readers may easily comprehend the pronounced superiority of the Hamilton team in every department of the game except in punting. When punting with the wind Knox failed to lift the ball high enough into the air; he also, in attempting spirals, by not hitting the ball squarely kicked off toward one side of the field.

Offensively, Union seemingly lacked drill. Their interference was worse than ours ever has been, being slow in starting and so ragged that our men could easily sift through to pick off the man carrying the ball As the strong wind made forward passing risky, neither team departed often from straight football. Union attempted five passes, two being successful, while Hamilton completed two out of three tries.

On the defense Union was surprisingly weak. Although their tackles were big men, each weighing 190 pounds, they were seldom seen in a scrimmage and as Union's ends were easily boxed out by our interference, our backs had very wide holes to romp through. Wood, defensive fullback for Union, seemed the only really active man on the team and made many excellent tackles. Union's attack included a great variety of plays which, for the most part, were well selected by Fairbairn, but our line smothered any attempt to rush the ball before it had crossed the scrimmage line.

Both Knox and Fairbairn made the mistake of not taking advantage of the sweeping south wind by punting continuously when defending the south goal.

As to other general faults in the play of the Hamilton team, Life, hypercritical as it is, admits that one only can be found: that cross-bucks should have been used to drive the ball from the five-yard line to a touchdown, instead of vainly battering at the strong Union center trio. Had this policy been followed out, we might have scored two more touchdowns. A score of 30-0 or 35-0 was earned by our Team.

—The Press Club has contracted with E. A. Wright of Philadelphia to publish early in December a souvenir Hamilton calendar. The calendar will contain six pages of College views and will be attractively covered in embossed leather. Copies may be secured from members of the Association for the sum of one dollar each.

—The Students' Association of Colgate University have voted to change the wording on the university seal from "Incorporated 1846" to "Founded 1819."
